Create open discussion	Provide greater cohesion among members and overcome the existing confusion, frustration and division						I think the most important, immediate task for the Board is to regain trust and support of the membership.	Re-establish and grow our reputation for independence, collaboration and diversity	These qualities need to be re-visited and there is a need for changes that will ensure our charity is an organisation that a diverse group of people can see themselves as part of and where everybody feels represented and respected for their opinions and contributions	I believe that whilst following these rules the board must also consider the ethos of Cochrane and it must act in an open and transparent way.	Ensuring the transparency of the new governing board.				Listening to our members, asking them what we are doing well and what needs to change, and working towards building trust between members and governance including establishing a transparent and effective two-way communication.			We need to create a culture of communication where everyone can speak their mind without fear of reprisal.
Refocus on heart of Cochrane	Reviewing the internal mechanisms of organisation, participation, resolution of potential conflicts and differences, as well as clarifying the degree of the necessary autonomy of territorial entities and individuals. All these mechanisms should prevail over —although making them compatible with—the constraints from the legal structure of the organisation					Groups should be actively approached to include Cochrane presentations and evidence at the meetings even if to be sponsored by the Cochrane group themselves. As a urologist for the last 32 years, attending 5-6 meeting per year, I have never seen any Cochrane presentation.	Improve the experience for Cochrane authors through more efficient review production that maintains rigour and facilitates updating of our reviews. This requires technological and methods development and implementation, editorial support and standards					The people who I hope to represent are the practising hands and feet of Cochrane.		Working with Cochrane members, guideline developers, clinicians, and public, as a team, to develop clinically relevant evidence reviews efficiently, cost effectively, in a timely manner, without compromising the quality.				It is imperative that the organisation gives back more and reconsiders the need for so much employed staff.
Member engagement	Continuing the efforts to become an organisation really global, participative, multilingual, and inclusive					This can be done by the broader engagement of the membership in decision making and enhance communication. Any controversial issues must be promptly addressed with full transparency.	Increase real global inclusion through organisational structures and processes that facilitate diverse and meaningful input into strategic planning and decision-making												Third, we ought to think if the organisation has become too rigid and bureaucratic.
Business model	Developing a sustainable and ambitious economic model that combines institutional agreements, progressive open access policies and more support to Cochrane entities					Like with many non-profit organisations the financial stability is very important and include healthy income, money managing and smart use of the funds.	Navigate changes in global publishing and funding models to sustain Cochrane for the next generation and ensure we make the most of new opportunities										Responding to challenges related to funding and financial support for the network		Finally, we must start transitioning to fully Open Access publication.
